

With eggs, it is all about the hunt and this new twist has no season.

Hide trivia questions in re-useable plastic eggs or make your own "eggs" - see below. Hide the eggs all over the yard or house. When the hunt is over, the trivia questions may be answered by the finder or as a family. You may also hide the questions and the answers and match them up after your hunt.

Although the fun is in the hunt, the learning is everywhere.

Encourage a child to take a turn at managing a hunt; research questions, hide the eggs, approve the answers. This provides an opportunity to practice planning, presenting, and people skills.

Clip trivia questions from our Egg-cellent Trivia activity to create an egg themed hunt or make up your own trivia hunt on topics that interest your family.

Have everyone write a few kind statements about each other; "Sue, I like how kind you are to the cat. Paul, I like how you tell a joke." The side effects of an appreciation hunt can be long lasting. When our good deeds and behaviour are noticed and appreciated, we are encouraged to do more. Sharing compliments makes everyone feel good.

Cut a recycled letter sized envelope in half to create a pocket for your trivia question or message. See image below. Cut out and trace this egg shape on the envelope half. Colour and decorate the drawing. Make a few. Tuck your message inside and hide your "eggs".

EGG TEMPLATE

Bird eggs are often coloured, marked with spots, splotches and squiggles to help them camouflage or blend into the nest. Try your hand at camouflage. Cut out a few paper or boxboard (cereal box) eggs. Cut out and use the egg template here. Take time and look closely at the colours and patterns in the area where you will hide your eggs. Colour the eggs to camouflage them. Add a few colourful eggs to experience the importance of good camouflage.
